Among these documents not previously known to have been stolen from the Media Resident Agency was captioned Police Instructor's Bulletin, which sets forth a Positive Program on Police-Community Relations utilized by the Rochester, New York, Police Department entitled Scout Awareness for Emergency (SAFE). The program, Operation Safe, was implemented by the Boy Scouts of America, Otetiana Council, in cooperation with the Rochester, New York, Police Department. The Scouts were asked to assist the local police and report such instances as fires, faulty traffic lights, fallen trees, youngsters playing in dangerous places, shoplifting, robberies, vandalism, broken windows, strangers loitering around schools and the like. Thefts Prompt FBI To Close Some Offices

By George Lardner Jr.
 Washington Post Staff Writer

The FBI is planning to close some of its 500 resident-agent offices in hopes of preventing any more embarrassing burglaries.

Tighter security was ordered by FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, who is said to have been furious over the theft of more than 1,000 FBI documents from the Media, Pa., office March 8.

The FBI had no comment on the proposed closings and apparently no final decision has been made on which ones will be axed.

According to one account, the 76-year-old Hoover was so annoyed by the nationwide publicity over the Media raid that he initially wanted all of the FBI's suboffices closed. But Justice Department sources predicted that less than a third will be shut down. At many others, however, stricter security measures will be put into effect.

According to local police, the burglars forced their way into the Media office through an unused door by pushing aside a file cabinet that normally blocked it on the inside. The resident agent in charge was subsequently suspended without pay for 30 days and transferred to Atlanta.

The FBI is also understood to have dispatched a team of inspectors to check on the security of all its offices, big and small, as a first step in preventing a recurrence of what Justice Department officials have called "a new peace-tactic."

Copies of 31 of the documents stolen in the Media raid have been mailed to various newspapers and members of Congress. Responsibility for the theft has been claimed by a group calling itself "The Citizens' Commission to Investigate the FBI," but no arrests have been made.

With 8,400 agents, the FBI maintains 59 field offices or regional headquarters in major cities in the United States and Puerto Rico, along with 11 "liaison posts" in foreign countries.

Reporting to the field offices, in turn, are some 500 "resident agencies" or suboffices scattered throughout the nation to provide wider, geographic coverage and a ready response to cases requiring investigation.

Some suboffices are one-man operations, with resident agents operating at times out of their own homes. Others keep more than a dozen FBI men at work. Whenever possible, the FBI sets up shop in a local Federal building or post office, but in some small towns, such as college communities, the offices are in commercial buildings that are more difficult to guard.

The FBI has maintained approximately 500 suboffices for at least nine years, with their locations varying more often than their number.

The closings, it was understood, will depend on the FBI's assessment of the need for a local office and the cost of guarding it adequately. Some, it was said, will "just be told to put more locks on their doors."

Regional headquarters generally have plenty of locks already. The FBI's Los Angeles bureau, for example, is on the top (17th) floor of the Federal building where a guard is always posted at the main entrance to the building.

Visitors find their handbags, briefcases and other packages searched on entering. And upstairs, the public entrance to the FBI office consists of a double door with two locks opening onto a reception room with nothing more than two desks.

Justice Department officials have complained that the documents stolen in the Media raid and made public by the self-styled Citizens Commission were carefully plucked out of context to make the FBI look bad and to create the impression that it uses police-state tactics.

II ACTIVITIES

The January 17, 1971, edition of 'The Washington Post,' a local WDC newspaper, carried an article entitled "NUN CALLS KIDNAP CHARGE INCREDIBLE." The article states in part the following:

"Sister Beverly Bell is a Roman Catholic nun and an English teacher who worked with the poor in East Baltimore for five years and who, a few months ago, came here to do postgraduate work at George Washington University.

"Last Tuesday, in Harrisburg, Pa., a federal grand jury contended that Sister Beverly had tried to further and to effect a conspiracy to blow up heating tunnels in government buildings and to kidnap Henry A. Kissinger, a presidential adviser.

"Last Nov. 27, FBI director J. Edgar Hoover had described a plot to kidnap a then-unidentified White House aide and to demand as ransom an end to American bombing in Southeast Asia and the release of all 'political' prisoners in the United States. His announcement was followed by protests that if the director had such information, he should seek indictments of those involved in the alleged plot.

"'Totally incredible,' the nun said yesterday of the accusations. She was one of seven persons named as co-conspirators by the grand jury.

"But in addition to joining with others named in the indictment who have denied any part in the purported plot, Sister Beverly dealt with what the indictment characterized as her two 'overt acts' -- acts that in themselves can be innocent, but that are performed with illegal intent:

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

WFO 100-52951

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

"First, the jury charged, on or about July 16, 1970, three of the six defendants, and two of the unindicted co-conspirators, including Sister Beverly, 'met in Lewisburg, including Sister Beverly, 'met in Lewiburg, Pa.'

"Second, said the jury, on or about Aug. 20, 1970, 'Beverly Bell moved to Washington, D.C.'

"The reporter asked Sister Beverly about her meeting in Lewisburg, which the indictment lists without explanation as an 'overt act.'

"She said that she drove there from Baltimore to attend a rally at the gates of the Lewisburg Federal Penitentiary protesting the solitary confinement of the Rev. Philip Berrigan, a Josephite priest listed in the indictment as a defendant.

"Sister Beverly said that she had never been in Lewisburg before, except to drive through; that while there for the rally she entered no building, and that after about 1½ hours she returned to Baltimore.

"To say that her visit in Lewisburg was in any way conspiratorial was, she said, 'incredible.'

"What of the second unexplained 'overt act,' her move to Washington a few weeks later?

"Since 1965, Sister Beverly said in giving the background of the move, she had worked in programs for the poor and as administrator of the Martin de Porres Educational Center in East Baltimore.

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

WFO 100-52951

"She had not gone back to school for graduate study for a full 10 years, a period her religious order regards as an unusually long one.

"At this point in the interview, Sister Rosalie Murphy, her provincial superior in the Sisters of Notre Dame, de Namur, and a longtime friend, picked up the narrative.

"Sister Rosalie said she had invited nuns among the 520 in her province (which takes in New York, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, the District of Columbia, Virginia, the Carolinas and Georgia) to request new assignments.

"Sister Beverly was one of many who requested to be allowed to study in Washington. And, in late July or early August of last year, she was one of 190 nuns who drew new orders.

"In short, Sister Beverly said, with Sister Rosalie agreeing, she came to Washington because 'I was assigned here to study.'

"Was there any possible relation to a conspiracy?

"Of course not,' Sister Beverly said.

"Sister Rosalie said, 'The whole thing is preposterous.'

"After the indictment was returned, Sister Rosalie and others in the religious congregation sent expressions of support to Sister Beverly. She valued these, of course.

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

WFO 100-52951

"But, she said, she valued still more their expressions of trust, because "trust" means I am totally innocent."

STATEMENT OF BISHOP ANTULIO PARRILLA-BONILLA

I like to make public my moral support of the Borrigan brothers, Daniel and Philip, both priests in prison for their consciences and for their solid convictions and their sincere actions for peace and for their profound respect for human lives. I also back most enthusiastically their friends, some of whom are here present, who are also conscientious objectors to war and killing. My support is here announced on the occasion of the recent charges against them and their friends made by the Justice Department of the United States. The accusations are so outlandish and so contrary to the methods so far used by the peace militants in this country that it is obvious that there is an attempt by the accusers to try to morally destroy the leadership of the peace movement and also an intent to try to overcome the effectiveness of certain actions - about twenty-seven so far - performed against government property used to promote an immoral war in Vietnam and an over-growing military apparatus.

These actions, carried out by young militants of both sexes, with deep religious and moral persuasions, and with a great sense of urgency dictated by their consciences, have been so efficient that they have been instrumental in really saving the lives of others by paralyzing the draft in at least one city and making it difficult in many others.

People with well-formed consciences, especially if they are willing to suffer for their true and genuine exercise of them against the abuses and injustices of the state, even at the risk of persecution, prison or death, are really very far from being criminals. They are not. If not at present, in the future, I hope it will not be a too-distant one, they should be widely considered national heroes of their country and future saints of the churches.

COMMITTEE STATEMENT

A Washington's Birthday Defense Committee has been established in D.C. for the defense of the six persons indicted January 12, 1971 in Harrisburg, Pa.

They have been charged with conspiracy to kidnap Presidential aide Henry Kissinger and to bomb heating systems in Washington, D.C.

We have joined together in a conspiracy of conscience to support the six defendants and seven co-conspirators who have devoted their lives to opposing the violence perpetrated by the government on its own people and the world community. We believe that more and more people must stand up to confront the repression, oppression, racism and conspiracy by the government which is being brought to bear upon all of those who dissent. We ask our community to join us in rejecting this attempt to discredit our fundamental commitment to peace and freedom.

We want to raise the level of political consciousness of the citizens of the D.C. area by attempting to focus public attention on the issues raised by the indictment and to build a strong coalition of peace oriented groups and individuals to meet the current challenge.

We invite our fellow citizens of the greater Washington Metropolitan area to be a part of this effort. We need funds, political support, moral support, office supplies and telephones. Those who wish to assist us may reach us at

On March 9, 1971, Sister BEVERLY BELL, self-proclaimed as one of the so called co-conspirators of the East Coast Conspiracy, appeared alone before an assembled group of 100 students of the Virginia Theological Seminary, also known as the Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Virginia. She spoke at the Seminary's weekly forum hour at the invitation of the Forum Hour Committee which is a group of seven Seminary students. Guest speakers of all varieties are invited to the school on a weekly basis.

She commenced her 35-minute appearance, which started at noon, by passing out a four-page, undated tabloid entitled, "Good News" which cites the Federal Indictment Number 14886 charging EQBAL AHMAD, et al with violation of Title 18, United States Code, Sections 371 and 1201(c). The tabloid also contains the "Statement of Defendants and Co-Conspirators" together with a brief background paragraph on each of the thirteen persons whose names appear therein.

On the back page of the tabloid there is a notice which announces the opening of the Washington's Birthday Defense Committee office on the first floor at 245 Second Street, Northeast, Washington, D. C. The committee is described as having been established for the defense of the six persons indicted on January 12, 1971, in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and a solicitation for contributions and services is printed in the same column.

BELL stated that the Third World will be established around the government orienting itself towards the people's interests and not those of the present government which has oriented itself in a materialistic and militaristic manner. She related that although she was educated at Trinity and Villanova Colleges, it was not until she lived and worked in the ghettos of Baltimore that she received her real education. It was here that she related herself to the Third World which identifies itself with the black people, the Vietnam War, and the people of Brazil and South America instead of the present government which has oriented itself towards materialism, militarism, and corporate control. She mentioned that the ECCSL has been involved in the disruption of twelve to fifteen Selective Service boards on the East Coast, but did not identify the locations.

BELL said that she believes in the philosophy of aggressive non-violence where it does not harm human life. She further explained that the Catholic theology has taught her that her conscience should be the motivating factor which determines right from wrong; that conscience is the highest law and that authority is based on conscience.

She illustrated her point by referring again to attacks on the Selective Service System and stated in essence that destruction of these government records, though illegal by law, should not be considered wrong when this act was dictated by conscience. She repeated that one's conscience should prevail when in conflict with laws established by the government.

According to BELL, the disruption of public buildings and destruction of property without harm to individuals, would be acceptable to her conscience and considered to be non-violent in nature if it were done with the idea of partially disrupting a corrupt evil institution. She commented that she believes in massive non-violent civil disobedience if it would stop the operations of the government even for several days. BELL reiterated that the only assurance of success is action, but that the ECCSL would not use a bomb for destructive purposes.

She likened our government to that of embryonic Nazi Germany where the Church is silent while the government murders, tortures, and imprisons persons. She stated that the granting of immunity to anyone who will inform on other people is wrong and violates one's civil rights.

At the end of her lecture, she asked for any questions from the assemblage. One of the questions was to the effect: "Are institutions inadequate or their functions?" She answered by saying the ECCSL wants to confront consciences, but there is no way to reach consciences in government channels; therefore, we have to strike at the military because they are the source of our oppression...people's lives are more important than property. Torture machines and conscription have no right to exist. Civil laws are not as important as moral laws. The authority of an individual is based on his conscience.

A student asked "How can the Episcopal Church relate to you and your beliefs?" She said, "We envision hundreds of thousands of people coming to Washington--to completely halt the operation of the government by blocking traffic and so congesting the city to make it inoperable." This is to take place in the first part of May.

The March 13, 1971, edition of "The Washington Post" carried an article entitled "KISSINGER, 3 PLOT SUSPECTS MET TO SALVE 'BITTERNESS'" The article read as follows:

"Presidential adviser Henry Kissinger had a private meeting at the White House a week ago with three of the 13 persons the Justice Department says conspired to kidnap him. 'It was very pleasant,' said Kissinger yesterday.

"Tom Davidson, one of the three at the meeting, said Kissinger's 'got this weird thing for us who operate out of the morality bag. He sees himself as the conscience of the administration . . .'

"In an interview, Kissinger hastened to rebut that comment: 'I did not say I was the conscience of the administration.'

"'This was not political,' said Kissinger about the meeting with Davidson, 25, son of the Episcopal bishop of Western Kansas; William Davidon, 44, professor of physics at Haverford College, and Sister Beverly Bell, 44, of the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur.

"Such meetings, he added, are an attempt 'to transcend the bitterness of the public dialogue' about the war.

"Kissinger said he has had many meetings with peace movement persons and considers secrecy about such meetings necessary in order to keep his contacts in the movement.

"'It's very important to talk to them,' said Kissinger, who according to Justice Department charges, was to have been kidnaped on Washington's Birthday in a plot allegedly involving 13 persons led by the Rev. Philip Berrigan. u

"Father Berrigan is now imprisoned with his brother, the Rev. Daniel Berrigan at Danbury Federal Prison for destruction of draft records in 1968 at Catonsville, Md.

"Kissinger said the alleged plot was not discussed during his 75-minute session last Saturday with three of the seven co-conspirators named, but not charged, in the alleged plot. Six others have been charged with conspiracy to kidnap Kissinger and blow up heating tunnels under federal buildings here.

"Sister Beverly said she understood the meeting was to have been secret and would not discuss it. Davidson and Davidon, however, said they had the impression Kissinger had no objection to public discussion of the meeting after a week had gone by.

"Davidon said he and the other two visitors had an amicable conversation with Kissinger but he summed up the session as 'bittersweet.'

"'He was a good listener,' said Davidon. 'He didn't nit-pick arguments and didn't try to divert the discussion to minor things . . . He stayed with what we were talking about.' 4

"On the Vietnam war, Davidon said Kissinger 'tried to maintain that setting a deadline for the withdrawal of U. S. troops was not the crucial issue and . . . we tried to explain that we think it is.' He said Kissinger insisted that 'we're trying to end the war as soon as possible.'

"There was 'a little discussion, not as much as I would like, on the general direction of U.S. foreign policy and whose interest it serves,' said Davidon, adding, 'Kissinger sees himself as being concerned about his responsibility to the public, but I think he is deluding himself.'

"Arrangements for the unusual meeting were made by Brian McDonnell of Philadelphia. McDonnell fasted for 30 days in Lafayette Park in protest of the Cambodian invasion last spring. He met Kissinger at that time."

The March 12, 1971, edition of "The Evening Star," a local WDC newspaper, carried an article entitled "3 'PLOTTERS' VISIT KISSINGER," by MARY MC GRORY, Star staff writer. The article set out essentially the same information as set forth above.

First speaker is Sister Beverly Beall.

I would like to begin by giving you a brief background, my own and the background of most of the defendants and co-conspirators who find themselves in the position of being enemies of the United States Government at present. I feel like I'm not projecting my voice so if you can't hear me at this point raise your hand. For the benefit any possible Trinity College girls who might be here, or just to give a plug for the college, I graduated from Trinity College and I was an English teacher for some years until I went to a ghetto in East Baltimore where I received my real education.

Most of the defendants and most of the co-conspirators come out of the same kind of background, those from middle America, somewhat privileged, and found themselves working at one point in their career working in the black communities and poor communities and this is where our whole career of resistance began. I learned for instance in East Baltimore that the United States court system does not really work for the poor and the powerless. I learned this over and over again in many cases that came up with people we knew in the ghetto.
One specific case I'd like to tell you about, a young boy, a friend of ours, [redacted] was running into difficulty and was accused of raping a 20 year old prostitute, as it turned out, in other words his case was framed. He was poor and young and black, therefore he didn't have a chance and I didn't have a chance when I testified for him in court, because the prosecuting attorney simply asked me questions to which I could answer no more than yes or no, that was according to court procedure so I understand, but it didn't do justice or achieve justice for this young boy who was given 15 years, and he was a young artistic boy, a real artist and he hasn't been able to adjust to prison life and after his bail hearing in August, rather his parole hearing in August after three years, was turned down, because he hadn't been able to adjust to prison life. The reason he hasn't been able to adjust to prison life is very simple, he was trying very hard to make it, keep out of trouble so that he could get on parole, and one day he was jumped by a group of boys and the guard intervened and he hit the guard by mistake, well they put in solitary confinement, the hole, which was a sub-terranean room, small room, no lights, no clothing, they stripped him, bread and water, for two weeks, and he couldn't adjust to that. He is now at the State Mental Institution for the Insane at Jessup. Now that's just one case that touches on the most that's why I usually use it. Many other cases like that. Many people in jail who have neither received fair trials or have not been able to get bail, all kinds of things, because they are poor, and black and powerless, and our justice system just does not always work for these people. I began to learn something about the inter-relatedness of the problems we face in the ghetto everyday, after I'd been there about four years. The inter-relatedness of ghetto problems, the war in Vietnam, the economic exploitation of all the third world, all the things that are going on in Brazil, the persecution and torture under the military dictatorship there, I began to really learn the inter-relatedness of all of these problems and began to realize how closely related they are to our own government and one day last Spring it struck me harder than at any other time was the day that the students at Kent State were shot and we were sitting around after school discussing it and really feeling quite depressed at the state of things, the recent invasion into Cambodia, and the violence across the nation and the Kent students having been shot to death and that same afternoon we got a message that a family that we knew in a parish about six blocks away where we worked had suffered a very severe tragedy. The mother had not been up from the south very long and she did not know where to find help, she was living in the project, public housing there and although she had been to some agency she couldn't get help, there were some aspects of her case that did not make her eligible and for three days had searched for food for her children and couldn't find anybody to help. We didn't know about her at that time so the third day she really reached her peak of desperation and went back home and threw two of her babies out the eleventh story window. Now the reason

b7c

I'm telling that is because it struck me very hard that day, that the tragedy at Kent and the tragedy six blocks away from us with seemingly little connection had a very deep connection and it had to do with the attitude of society and the United States Government's handling of peoples problems in terms of always putting property and material gain over people so that our value system which we continually operate out of is corrupted and very deeply corrupted, not only in our government, but in our society and I began to really understand why some of the other people I knew, Phil Berrigan and [redacted] [redacted] and some of the others had already realized the road that they had to take to really strike at the real causes of the suffering and the injustice the real causes of the suffering and the injustice and the repression that they had faced daily in the ghettos and that they watched happening to the news in Vietnam and other places and I began to understand why they chose for instance a Selective Service disruption as a very very dramatic and very concise way of demonstrating the value of people over property because they were attacking property that had no right to exist. I think that the Catonsville trial, the play by [redacted] in there it quotes a number of kinds of property that have no right to exist, it mentioned Hitler's gas ovens, instruments of torture, slum property, conditions of the slums that make a poor mother throw two babies out of an eleventh story window. While the constrictions which mean death to people, this kind of property has no right to exist.

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

and I began to see the Selective Service disruptions as a means of saying this very concretely and I began to consider a like path for myself because in working in the ghetto everything that we tried in terms of trying to better things, housing, education, anything, had really not succeeded. It was pretty clear to me that it really was not going to succeed because the people in power, those controlling, didn't want it to succeed, to that people were going to remain in poverty and in repression, and suffering injustices until enough people began confronting our society and our government in terms of the value of human life and this is what led me to Selective Service disruptions and taking public responsibility for the particular draft raid in New Haven, and I suppose this is why I find myself in the position I'm in today other than simply moving to Washington, D. C. on or about August 20 which was the overt action cited to me in the indictment. And I would to, I don't want to talk too long, I would like to make one other point in terms of the community of resistance I'm involved in. And I think it's very important that people like yourselves look at this and begin thinking, we have to be very very clear if you have yet any doubts who really is for life and liberty and who is struggling for it. And when you consider a group of people who have been indicted and named as co-conspirators for bombing and kidnapping you have to consider the kind of people being so abused. These people are well known for their commitment to the prospering of life and they have spent years

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

Its not just a case of having to do with six people indicted and seven people named as co-conspirators. This case has to do with your lives and your future as well and its not even soon enough for you to begin thinking and searching and deciding what you can do for the future of humanity and the future of our country in the face of the type of repression and injustice that is spreading daily. Now I'm going to stop here, for I've talked too long.

[redacted] next speaker

Listening to Beverly Beall speak to you I was thinking that I really can't think of a more eloquent statement of reasons why you should support these defendants and these co-conspirators than the statements she made and they really do deserve your support. I have a few reasons of my own to add and I'm going to add them briefly. I want to say a few things to you about also about governmental repression and about injustice. I'd like to talk to you about the legal and the factual issues in the trial, but I'm largely unable to do so, theres a rule of court in the Middle District of Pennsylvania which stands in my way so I'm going to be general and talk about some of the current issues involving repression, in particular the repression of those who are engaged in meaningful political dissent in this country, because it seems to me thats the issue thats involved here. The future of meaningful political dissent in this country. The government has a number of weapons, a number of very repressive weapons, weapons that of their lives in efforts to better the human conditions and they have taken serious personal risks some of whom are already in jail and for these people there really can be no doubt what they are concerned about. And then we look at the United States Government, who allows the overkill, the 30 times overkill of every world citizen to continues escalation of the war in Cambodia and Laos who spends billions in space and millions of our own citizens literally rot and starve in our cities. And a government that can pour 1.5 million dollars into the military dictatorship of Brazil which presently holds over 12,000 political prisoners in jails throughout the country, many without trial, many of whom are sisters and priests and students and Catholic workers where they are being tortured, very sophisticated means of torture, where their local police in Brazil receive their training at the International Police Academy here in Georgetown, about this government there really must be doubts and people like ourselves must be confront this and really realize whats happening in this country because those who have put their actions and their words in dissent against the perpetration of these kinds of evil by our government are now being treated like the poor and powerless because they are a threat and its not just us, it may be you. You know its very unreal and very naive to think that you will not be someday in the same situation if you have a conscientious and if you are aware and if you keep your eyes and ears open and thats something to think about.

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

seem to me strike at the very heart of the first amendment, freedom of speech, freedom of association and this trial really explains the use of these techniques and perhaps I can start out by the use of the government of electronic surveillance. Now we don't know yet whether surveillance, wire tapping, eavesdropping, bugging, has been used in this case, but from our knowledge of other cases and other people similarly situated we've got a pretty good idea that surveillance will probably rear its head sometime during the prosecution. You know the President and the Attorney General assert the right in this country to engage in surveillance of persons who are threatening the national security and they also assert the right to determine for themselves who such persons are and having so determined, of course, they proceed with the surveillance without court order without court authorization on their own and it seems to me again not speaking of this case because as I said we don't know whether we have it here yet, it seems to me this really poses a threat, I'm sure you read in the papers about the use of surveillance these days. It seems to me it causes people perhaps like you and me to be concerned what we say and to whom we speak even in our own home and on our own telephone these days and I'd just like to ask you is this the kind of a society in which we wish to live. Another weapon which we have seen used in this case involves the grant of immunity. We've seen the government use under a very recently enacted statute an organized crime act of 1970 which although is directed at organized crime it turns out has many uses that the government can see fit to put it too. The grant of immunity to people, anyone at all, the grant of immunity to anyone at all, and compels testimony, the compulsion that they testify overriding their fifth amendment or sixth amendment or first amendment privileges not to speak out, but to remain silent in order to secure evidence and it seems to me we've seen this used in Harrisburg, it's still being used, it's a very harsh measure, it seems to me it's greatly threatens expression and association, who can people really talk to anymore, perhaps only their lawyers. You know it's really good these days to be a lawyer, because you're one of the few people that may not be able to be compelled to give testimony against people that speak to you about what they're doing. Of course many people say, you know if you aren't doing anything wrong and you have nothing to hide you really don't have to worry. But you know that isn't true, and it isn't true when you look at the conspiracy prosecution and that's the government's third weapon that I'd like to talk about because the statute and the concept of prosecution is so vague and so limited that it can encompass almost anything that the persons who are in a position to bring the prosecution feels is detrimental. Let me give you an example. You know the conspiracy prosecution dates all the way back to a statute in 1305 in England, but in those days the statute was limited to an agreement to procure a false indictment and that was the limit of the conspiracy prosecution. Wouldn't it be nice if we could see some conspiracy prosecution along those lines today? Well of course its so broad that many uses in England and most of them were political because it soon became apparent that the conspiracy prosecution was peculiarly suited to political prosecution and political repression and of course its had that history in this country. In 1805 a number of journeymen in Philadelphia were prosecuted for a strike and the charge in the indictment charged them with an unlawful combination to raise their wages and they were convicted and that was one of the earliest uses of the conspiracy prosecution in the United States and from then until now the political use of this prosecution of course has been seen. The labor movement was prosecuted for years and years and years for unlawful combinations to improve their standards of living we've seen it of course more recently in the Smith Act prosecutions of alleged Communists in the 1950's and of course we see it now in prosecutions like this one and its so vague, let me give you an example and go back to 1821. Some of those same journeymen who had been successfully prosecuted for attempting to strike for higher wages tried to turn the tables and institute a prosecution against the employers for a combination to depress wages. The court held that prosecution would not lie because the object of the combination in that case was meritorious as opposed of course to the non-meritorious nature of the 1805 prosecution brought against the journeymen.

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

So you see what it is of course a lawyer will tell you that a conspiracy charge involved in a grievance to accomplish something unlawful or perhaps to accomplish something lawful by unlawful means, but the history of this it pretty much usable against whatever combination or grievance is felt by the government to be non-meritorious. Now given the vagueness of that, Clarence Darrow once was quoted to the effect that it is remarkable that this particular bit of tyranny should have found its place in America. But of course it did, and it still does and that's what involved here. And the threat is very great. The threat is particularly great when you think of these weapons that can be brought to bear against people who are simply speaking out against the government and against the war and against oppression and repression and against poverty. And when you see the use of this it seems to me that you have to ask yourself a number of questions, and they're the same kinds of questions which Beverly Beall really was addressing to you. I think you have to ask yourself whether we can tolerate this atmosphere in this country. And if we can't, what can we do about it. What can you and I do. Well I think it's worth asking that question, certainly one of the immediate things you can do is lend your support to these people, because they deserve it, and because next time the knock might be at your door. Thank you.

I guess the best thing I can say is to go try to explain how I got to where I get and how I got here. If you can't hear me raise your hand, I have this terrible habit of not speaking up. (Laughter) I grew up in Boston in a low income area, partly white and partly black which turned black very rapidly as I grew up. I grew up in a very strong, religious Irish Catholic family, six others, brothers and sisters and the one thing that came out of family life all along was tremendous respect for people that I lived with, the neighbors, blacks, anyone and so its very naturally for me when I got out of high school, I went to a technical high school in Boston, when I got out of high school, it was very natural for me to go into the Vista program by doing some work, trying to do some work in western North Carolina and the Appalachian Mountains. At the same time I knew what we were doing in Vietnam, '67 or '68 I guess, and I was very much opposed to what we were doing and I was very much opposed to killing anyway so I applied for the conscientious objector status and received that, but I was not allowed to fulfill my year in Vista and I was not allowed to, Vista was not accepted as alternative duty by the board so I was drafted out of Vista and then I went to I was assigned to a hospital in a suburb of Boston and one of the richest suburbs of Boston I went out there when I got back home and I tried to get a job there and they had no needs for any, they had no openings at all at any level. So I went to Boston City Hospital which basical-

CONFIDENTIAL

serves the low income areas and is always crying for help and I got a job there. The Local Board said no you can't work there and I said why, obviously theres a greater need here than out at Newton Wellesly and they said well you have to be away from home, you have to be you getting this special priveleges as a C.O. and you have to be punished to some extent. So thats the reason I could not work where I was more needed. So I refused to leave there and I after two months they finally accepted the fact that I wasn't going to leave. All of these things that happened between the draft board and also at the same time I lost two close friends in the war and, guys I was in CYO with and that was all working on my head. The thing that became obvious to me was the fact that basically I wanted to work in some way to help people out people and the one thing that was standing in my way was draft board and the U. S. Government. I couldn't support in any way the Selective Service System because it was directly involved in what was happening around the world so I turned in my draft card at that time and told them I was no longer working for them in the hospital I continued working here until I had to quit so I could get involved in things like [redacted] and a year later I was indicted for refusing to carry my draft card and for not completing ? duty. The thing was that it was so absurd to me that it really hit me hard because on paper I was facing 15 years for not doing some things and I just made it very plain to me who the enemy was that and if I intended to support the people I grew up with to help them out in any way to support the people of this country I could not show any respect or pay any honor to the Selective Service System of the U. S. Government or what its doing and I couldn't show any respect for the courts who were protecting this Government and what its doing in Vietnam so I refuse to go to trial and I took sanctuary in the church in downtown Boston and I got a lot of support from the community I came from, the local parish I was in, half black, half white parish and the people I had grown to know growing up so there was much didn't appear to be radical although the most radical thing I've experienced in my life church is full of all ages, kids, 80 and 90 year old women and the thing that people were saying at that time was that the whole situation was absurd to continue supporting the government and respecting its institution would be very dangerous to be doing. Basically I find it very necessary to oppose with every last breath every step of the way this government. I understand what that means, I understand that we're not playing games at all because we're not dealing with anything too easily to deal with, dealing with the government it is still killing children more and more, so we're dealing with a government that is plagued with a greatest level of insanity its reached yet. So in order to continue to operate to live with the people I grew up with it will be necessary to continue to oppose this government and refuse to support in any way. And thats what I'll be doing.

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

One thing before we start I was saying to [] that one of the great qualities is that [] has to offer us is that he built his whole life around accepting from others of the love they would give him that he was looking in America not for monetary possessions or not for a style of life that would be comfortable in the middle class society rather for people to somehow determine respect for each other and to conquer that first and figure how to build a society. And [] answered me today she said that's why he's only five foot two and weighs 95 pounds, he's hard to find. I would like to do I would like to express my own personal gratitude to Mr. Hoover, the Justice Department for making this symposium possible (laughter) for giving people a chance to meet and talk with each other in a rational way and maybe it's the way God works. You know it's one of those strange ways of helping people. [] could tell you, [] and everybody that knows me that I've spent my life trying to get a platform and here it is (laughter). I'm always trying to get on stage and I'm always being kicked off, so I'm very grateful and I'm deeply in debt. One of the nice things about the indictment that I think is going to be very helpful is our ability to fashion in a reasonable way a society for the future of the people. In the methodology by which other people can take responsibility has since become part of America and achieved some sort of status within the society is to learn from people what it really means to love and what it really means to give and I consider this indictment as sort of a baptism into a society which has suffered so long because of my silence and my irresponsibility and my willingness to sit back and let other people bear the burden that I should have borne, so that the type of suffering which we have created at the society in Indo-China the type of suffering that we have created in are responsible to in America for the black and for the poor so that the society that I have been indoctrinated into accepting will again learn about what it means to be irresponsible, what it means to be insane and what it means to carry out a policy of death and war making at the expense of the lives of their young, their poor. There can't help it but be in some way a coming back of the violence that we've practiced against others and I would hate to say that my position in society was that of accepting the violence that we send out towards others and to have to be standing there when it comes back to us as cause. And I think that if we sit back in America and we sit back and let other people be responsible when we're not I think we're gonna have to think about what the consequences of that are going to be for our children as well as ourselves. In spending six years of my life here in Washington in a seminary nearby this college could never possibly in the world ever figure what in the hell I was doing there to put it quite honestly, why I was sitting over there and sort of going through my mind a pro-sensitivity of caring for others, being concerned and loving and all the inner naval searching I guess it was it was a whole world of suffering and a whole world of people that were being exploited and cheated and carried through such burdens of inhumanity and I was enjoying really the privilege of being a seminarian. It took exactly two months in the priesthood in a ghetto parish in New Orleans to figure that everything that I learned about Christianity from the seminary and from the teachers and from my standing was not Christianity at all, it was a real cover-up for what I didn't have to do. I was always taught there was a ^{separation} ~~terrible~~ of church and state and here I go to New Orleans and I find out that churches work hand in hand with the state. That their silence was allowing the state to continue a policy of repression against blacks in that city and it took another year before I understood that repression of the people in New Orleans and also when I was stationed in Baltimore to understand that repression that was carried against the blacks there was just part of a larger policy that this government has. In Indo-China its killing and maiming people on a grand scale and that this policy of defense and this policy of war making was part of my responsibility in that by my silence and my sitting back that could continue. The problem to me was a problem of conscientious. To some people maybe its just a problem of plain no humanity, but I couldn't possibly see how the government could tell me that they could take some young black kid from that ghetto send him over there to die or be maimed in some way, and say that was just when I saw what was happening to them in parish where I live. So when I spoke out the church maybe in its own way awakening, punished me, by saying you can no longer practice your ministry in this way. They're not supposed to do that, don't you realize your criticizing the government and that's gonna upset people and that some of the money that's coming into the church may be cut off because of that. I had to live with that. It's funny, but they succeeded in taking me out of the parish because they promised to replace me with a black priest, a good friend of mine and three months later he went and did the same thing I did, because he felt the same way I did and it was very hard for that society to say to a black priest, you don't understand the black community because they were whites and you know that society had the nerve to tell him that they were gonna remove him from the parish because he did not understand the black community. A white superior telling a black priest in a black community that he didn't understand his own people. That's the level of thinking that that society was about. And if I found that on a church scale, I found people in positions in society to be even more deaf to be even more hardened to be even more lacking in conscientious about what it means to sit back and see a young person die for useless reasons. If that doesn't make us sick in mind and in spirit sick enough to do something about it, than I feel sorry in the worst way for the people who refuse to be responsible. I feel sorry for the people that don't consider it a privilege to be indicted by the most inhumane government. I really feel sorry for that because it's so important that the lives of the people of this country the lives of your young, your poor, are not destroyed but understood, its in that whole idea of creativity that whole idea of what in their own youthfulness and their own culture that we seem so determined to destroy, that our future lives^(c) has become economically, well I don't know if its become economically strong but we become strong technologically and completely insane culturally so much that its almost a phobia where we have to destroy anything thats different than what we are instead of growing in the fact that there is a difference — ? — that we're avowed and maybe theres a difference in the Catonsville Nine play. I don't know how many of you have read the play or how many of you haven't but if you want to know more about us, the essence of our philosophy and our way of doing things, its really in that play and its the whole point of what we say is a moral stand against the war and we everyone well not everyone, but many of the people that are involved in the draft board actions have taken public responsibility for what they've done like Mary and Paul and Beverly and they're surfacing has invited the FBI over towards surfacing when we took public responsibility and I know like in our group we publicly committed an act of civil disobedience in tearing up the draft files in front of the FBI and inviting arrest and inviting trial, inviting the whole idea that comes from that and that its very interesting that the Bureau itself is very much aware of our trial so much to the point that when something happens thats not of our style they never come over and bother to ask us questions. A lot of the burning down of buildings and stuff like that they never bother us, but when somebody goes in the middle of the night and takes draft files they're just looking ^{for} ~~from~~ the surface and they come and question us all the time when that happens, like this happened last week and we got the press release about four or five days later and right behind the press was the FBI because they're looking for a group to surface and like you know they see a lot of the earmarks of our type of movement in us which will give you an idea of the length that the FBI has really gone to to try to create a conspiracy against the seven people or six people which is the Harrisburg thing and it will also give you an idea of how the government by its policy, the carrying out of its policy in Indo-China and its carrying out of its policy in Vietnam is creating a conspiracy by the actual violence that it carries against the people that were people were not together before a lot of times in terms of their criticism of the United States, by the violence that we continue to practice on people their growing together and their growing together in terms of not let alone happen to them what is continued at the governmental policy in their lives and we're creating conspiracies all over the world by the type of repression that we carry out and then they say well Communism is gonna come I think we've created a lot of solidarity in Communism because they all see us as a great threat to their lives and their freedom. — ? — its a person is alleged to have conspired and so presumably could have been in there, but for some reason isn't. We don't know why, we don't know why their names are thrown into an indictment when they aren't

-41- ~~CONFIDENTIAL~~

I think its a methodology that we're using in terms of having the trial in the court, many of the like if you understood the politics of the Chicago Eight trial and that sort all lot of this was used as a political forum and we believe the most political things to do in this trial is to prove our own innocence by proving our own innocence indict the government so the whole point is like an attempt by the government to discredit the people and we want to use it in our own way of saying whose guilty of the violence, you know whose you know whose really guilty here, who is really on trial and thats really the significance of making the trial itself very proper you know some on and some forth all the technicalities as it were were being used for the trial which doesn't move against the fact you know the defendants themselves testifying on their own behalf on their lifestyle and what their all about. But at the same time we want people not to say well you know a bunch of young kids we don't have to listen to them, they're black people, they're not of our culture, they don't have to listen. We want people to realize that we're very much in the same educational processes that they come from that an indictment against us is really an indictment against a society, the whole center of society itself and we really don't want to give them any excuse to say well you we really don't have to worry about that child because they're not like us or they're not part of our society or anything like and I think that's really the reasons behind it because we just don't want to give people an excuse not to be responsible, that ultimately they have to make decisions, and that whether this society's going to survive or not really depends on their ability to make those decisions and I think that's the reason you see in the selection of a lawyer. I don't know if that's helped or not.

Question: — ? — file for slander ? regarding the case

Answer: [] that might be done about Mr. Hoover's having made his announcement in November, that's the one your talking about I take it, and well I'm not really at liberty to say what we're going to do about it, but we are considering a number of possibilities in this case with respect to that. You say could you bring a civil suit of slander, the answer is probably no, because of his status as a high government official.

Answer: [] government's react to destruction of property. Its interesting enough that if they just allow it to continue they don't try to stop us then we do in fact continue if they don't ? . . . If they try to stop us they build that tremendous platform that [] talked about and they go back scratching their heads and saying what the hell do we do with these Catholic leftists. Whats the best move for them, I don't know, the more repressive a situation is the more aware people can become — ? — it says Billy clubs turn liberals into radicals, and I think he's right, you know.

[]: Well I mean you know that's the best thing they could have done, you know because my point of view is that before they're going to take any lives which I am sure is the point of view of a lot of people, before they're the lives of any more youngsters, they're going to have to take ours first by reason of saying I will not let you be, I will not be responsible to do that and I hope you can account for what you are doing. You know that the best way for them to react to that you know is to maybe accept this maybe this is the best thing they could have done, maybe in a sense if we're wrong the governments policy is good and everything else like that and we've made a mistake and we're all in error, the government will continue, but if they're wrong I think the government will change and I think that's the best thing.

Inaudible question

— ? — beating our head against the wall you know, you're not hurting anybody — ? — action on a different level, but what I'm wondering is that, I get in discussions all the time with people that don't ? radicalness, aren't even liberal you know and they talk heres a law that was broken its on the books see and how come — ? —

(BELL): I'd like to say first of all that we're not only — ? — American people we are speaking to society, and I for one will be more concerned about the way they respond because I think I'm pretty sure about the way the government will respond, and I'm much more interested in your response and I would like to say briefly about breaking the law which you might say to people at least if they are people who are religiously oriented or who are believers in this country - ? - people in this country have really put civil law in the supreme position that nothing is above civil law and this is what has to be confronted that there are some laws that could not exist and that there are some laws above civil law that have to be obeyed regardless of civil law.

[] I wanted to say that the answer of Martin Luther King to that question was that when you break a law as he did you stand ready to be punished as he did and was and of course in these actions people have accepted responsibility, people have served sentences, they are obeying the command of a higher law, they are making a moral action, but to the extent that a contravene civil law, they stand ready to pay the price but they do it for a purpose and I really think that this is just implicit in the tradition of civil disobedience in this country and I really think that's part of the answer too.

[] we should be in jail, because committing the act of civil disobedience and obeying the law with the Federal authorities there who witnessed this, they are violating their own laws by not arresting us, they can use the law when they want to use it and they violate it when they want to violate it, but when a citizen violates a law everybody get - ? - you know he broke a law, but the point is you know, who is really breaking the law, what is law all about, who basically does have respect for the law. That's a good question, a question that we could ask Sisters Beverly Bell and Susan Davis, members of the East Coast Conspiracy to Save Lives, will speak on U.N.C. campus Sunday, March 21 at 8:00 P.M. in Gerrard Hall. Members of this group, led by the two Roman Catholic priests, Phillip and Daniel Berrigan, were charged by J. Edgar Hoover with conspiring to kidnap presidential adviser, Henry Kissinger, and to blow up heating plants in federal buildings in Washington, D. C.

Denying Hoover's charges as "incredible," those named as conspirators and co-conspirators, including Sister Beverly Bell, are making their case known on campuses throughout the country. At U.N.C. they will present the issues and concerns of the East Coast Conspiracy to Save Lives and have entitled their talk "IN QUEST OF LIBERTY."

Recently, former attorney general, Ramsey Clark, offered to serve as a defense attorney for this group, also referred to as the "Harrisburg Six." The personal rivalry between Clark and Hoover indicates that the Harrisburg trial may be one of the most prominent legal cases of this century.

During the past five years, Sisters Beverly Bell and Susan Davis have worked in the ghettos of Baltimore and have been active in many other related social concerns.

A confidential source advised that Sister BEVERLY BELL of the East Coast Conspiracy To Save Lives (ECCSL) spoke on the evening of March 21, 1971, at Chapel Hill, North Carolina, under the sponsorship of Young Men's Christian Association, Young Women's Christian Association, and interested Catholics.

Sister BELL attacked the judicial process in the United States and criticized the government as being oppressive to the poor, blacks and the powerless. She condemned the government for permitting hunger to exist, and the Vietnam War to continue. She stated that people will ultimately be faced with making a moral judgment as to whether they can support the United States Government.

BELL spoke before an audience of about 300 persons and she did not make any statements advocating violence. There were no demonstrations or incidents of any type.

did not really know him. She thought that she had met him through their activities at [redacted]

[redacted] She thought that she had met [redacted] when they were both present at planning meetings for peace demonstrations. She said she participated in [redacted]

When questioned as to the depth of her involvement in the peace movement [redacted] still denied that she is very deeply involved. She said she still considers herself on the "fringe" because she never attends meetings or plans demonstrations. When asked about the planning meeting she attended for [redacted] she indicated this meeting took place at [redacted]

[redacted] She said that this meeting took place on Sunday, possibly March 28, 1971. [redacted] was in charge. There were 23 persons present including herself. She said the reason she knew there were 23 present was because one of the girls with her was bored and counted them. When asked to identify those present she named the following persons:

[redacted]

b7c

She advised she does not know the others who attended the meeting.

It was her idea to obtain copies of the Media FBI files to post on the cross. Nothing was mentioned about that before she mentioned it. The reason she thought of this idea was because the previous year a rally was held at the State Department on Good Friday and at this rally mock copies of the constitutions of various countries which "we oppress or have oppressed" were put on the cross. Since they were holding the Good Friday service at the Justice Department this year, it was obvious what should be done. After she mentioned the idea, [redacted] picked it up and said that that was "pretty heavy" (having serious consequences) and stated the penalty for possession of the files. She does not remember what [redacted] said at this point. u

There was some discussion about whether they would need lots of copies or just one. She stated emphatically that the first time she knew they had any copies of the Media FBI files was at the demonstration when they were handed out. She said her only knowledge of how they came to get the documents was what she heard [redacted] announce at the demonstration. Nobody ever discussed the Media burglary with her. No one at the meeting identified themselves as being from The Defense Committee in New York. There was some discussion at the meeting about having acts of civil disobedience at each station of the cross during the Good Friday demonstration. Memorial Bridge and the White House were mentioned as possible targets and [redacted] brought up the idea of putting chains across the Memorial Bridge.

She had no idea who brought the copies of the Media FBI files to the demonstration, but she is not surprised that they had the copies. She had no idea where the originals are, or who has them.

When questioned about why she talked to [redacted] about staying at [redacted] she stated that [redacted] may have recommended this possibility to her and told her to go see [redacted] but she cannot recall for sure why he recommended this. She is not sure if she met [redacted] and she is not sure if Sisters BEVERLY BELL or [redacted] were also mentioned by [redacted]. She said she had never heard [redacted]

[redacted] She had not heard any mention [redacted] She does remember [redacted] telling her something about [redacted]

[redacted] was shown a copy of a document containing some 300 signatures signed Second Conspiracy to Find America which was handed out at a rally on August 7, 1970, at Rodney Square in Wilmington, Delaware. The signatories claimed responsibility for the destruction of selective service files at local boards 1 and 2 in Dover and Georgetown, Delaware and State Headquarters of the Selective Service System in Delaware on Wednesday, June 17, 1970. It was pointed out to her that the name of [redacted] appears among the signers of this document. She was asked to explain whether she participated in these draft board breakins and if she did not, why did her name appear on the document. She advised she signed the document to give "some indication of my own seriousness and my opposition to the war." She denied that she participated in the aforementioned draft board breakins, or any draft board breakins. She said the document was passed around at [redacted] who asked everyone to sign it. She believes this was in July, 1970, on a Friday night because they were having "beer and crabs." [redacted] was not a member of [redacted] at this time and to the best of her knowledge, she was never at [redacted]

[redacted]

She does not know how deeply involved [redacted] was with [redacted]. Apparently [redacted] had a close personal relationship with [redacted] before he moved out to [redacted]. She declined to elaborate further but stated [redacted] "went away mad" (from [redacted]).

She does not know [redacted]

She never got to know any of these individuals very well because as soon as she moved to [redacted] relationships got so bad no one wanted to get to know her.

[redacted] went with her to Baltimore on one occasion some time around the latter part of September. She had to go to a doctor at Johns Hopkins Hospital and she did not feel like driving. After lunch at the Hospital they drove back to [redacted]. She never met any [redacted] and has no recollection or hearing any names from Baltimore except [redacted].

[redacted] advised she knew about [redacted]. [redacted] She does not remember who told her about it. She has no recollection of any mention of Camp David. She was asked if she knows about [redacted].

As of 5/27/71, Philadelphia has 87 pending informant files which have been opened and assigned for the specific purpose of assisting in the investigation of this case. Informants have been carefully selected on the basis of their occupation, associates or organizational affiliations.

In addition to the above mentioned sources, Philadelphia is continuing to direct and target all previously established security and criminal informants in connection with instant case.

All sources are contacted on a regular basis for pertinent information and in some instances have been targeted on a full time basis to infiltrate the group of suspects and to actively seek out information which could result in the solution of this case.

Philadelphia will continue to afford maximum effort to informant development, direction and advancement in this case.

Separate files have been opened on all individuals considered to be suspects. In each individual suspect investigation, efforts are being made to obtain photographs, handwriting and handprinting samples. A determination is made as to availability of fingerprints. Investigation is also directed to determine whereabouts of the suspect during the period 3/8 - 9/71, and his possible involvement in the planning and/or execution of the FBI Media Resident Agency burglary or in the distribution of surfaced stolen documents.

Movements and activities of key Philadelphia prime suspects are being followed by surveillance and informants.

A brief summary of activities, together with a physical description of those individuals no longer considered suspects as of 5/27/71, is included in details of this report. Subsequent reports will include the same information on other

I. CRIME SCENE

A. SURFACED DOCUMENTS

D.O.B. JAN 13, 1926, NEW HAVEN, CONN.

DR. PETER G. BENNETT 478 MARLBOROUGH RD.

Investigation, as set forth in Section A of this report, discloses that several original documents stolen from the Media Resident Agency were received by mail on April 28, 1971, by Dr. PETER GOLDTHWAITZ BENNETT, Rosemont, Pa. Dr. BENNETT in turn mailed these documents to the FBI, however, he refused to furnish any information as to the date and place of the postmark appearing on the envelope in which these items were received. Dr. BENNETT said that if subpoenaed, he would probably testify as to the receipt by him of these items.

[redacted] Washington Bureau of "The Los Angeles Times," Washington, D. C., turned over to the FBI, one original document and copies of several additional documents taken in instant burglary. These documents were received by mail in an envelope addressed to [redacted] Washington Office of the Los Angeles Times, postmarked April 22, 1971, at Wilmington, Del.

DR. PETER GOLDTHWAIT BENNETT, 478 Marlbridge Road, Rosemont, Pa., telephone 527-1773, a psychiatrist with offices at 208 Haverford Square, Haverford, Pa., MI 9-7531, was contacted at his residence at 7:30 p.m. after first being invited into his home by Mrs. BENNETT who was present during part of the interview.

BENNETT advised as follows:

On Wednesday of last week (April 28, 1971) BENNETT received through the mail an envelope which contained FBI documents relating to an investigation concerning a letter he had written to the local draft board in Media, Pa., having to do with whether he had ever registered for the draft. BENNETT stated the letter he wrote to the draft board was his way of protesting an undeclared war in Southeast Asia. In addition to the FBI documents, there was a Xerox copy of what looked like a newspaper article which may have been a clipping from the Bulletin, a Philadelphia evening newspaper. This item described the Citizens Committee to Investigate the FBI. 4

BENNETT stated he realized the items received were stolen documents and that it was a violation of the law for him to possess stolen government property. He called a friend whom he declined to name and discussed receiving the documents and following this friend's advice he returned them to the FBI by mailing them to SA [redacted] He does not know who sent him the documents and no one contacted him concerning them. b6 b7C

He said he did not receive the documents at his home and that the envelope he received them in along with the other item about the Citizens Committee to Investigate the FBI were put in the trash at his home and picked up by the Radnor Township Trash Collection Department the Friday (April 30, 1971) after he received them.

BENNETT refused to furnish any information about the description of the envelope and the date and place of postmark.

BENNETT added there is a point where he would cooperate and volunteered if subpoenaed before a grand jury, he would probably testify as to facts relative to the receipt of the package. He further commented he realized a crime had been committed and if someone stole his files, he would call the police. BENNETT noted some people do more radical things than others. Some would just sit on the Capitol steps without a permit and others would steal files, and he had sent a letter to the draft board about his draft status as a form of protest to an undeclared war in Southeast Asia.

He related during the course of the interview the FBI is doing more political work than it did 20 years ago, that the priorities of the FBI may be wrong in that more time should be spent on such things as organized crime and narcotics and less time on activities or young individuals in college as reflected in recent newspaper articles. He felt that as long as there was a war going on the priorities of the U.S. were wrong and that the people who release the FBI documents had good intentions and that the release of the documents could be worthwhile.

DR. BENNETT is a white male, 6'2", hazel eyes, brown graying hair, thinning on top, wears glasses, has mustache and beard, medium slender build, about 170 pounds, medium complexion.
